

Residential Aged Care Accommodation Financial Arrangements Summary

As at 1 April 2018
(Applying to residents admitted after 1st July 2014)

Means-Testing

The fees and charges payable by residents admitted to residential aged care accommodation after 1 July 2014 are largely determined by an assessment of the resident's income and assets carried out by the government.

This means-testing process determines a resident's Means-Tested Amount.

This amount is then used to determine what contributions a resident is expected to make towards the cost of their accommodation and also the cost of their care.

What Income is included?

Income included is generally the same as is used to assess a person's aged pension entitlement, plus the resident's actual aged pension amount.

This will include:

- Base aged pension (not supplements)
- Bank interest
- Investment income
- Rental income from any property
- Assessable superannuation income
- Foreign pension income
- Any other income

The government uses its set deeming rates to determine assessable income from investments, bank deposits etc. rather than the actual income earned on these investments.

What Assets are Included?

Again, the assets included will be similar to those used to assess a person's pension entitlement but may also include the resident's home.

This will include:

- The person's home (see notes following)
- Household contents
- Car, caravan, boat
- Holiday home/shack
- Investment property
- Bank deposits
- Investments
- Any assessable superannuation

How is the resident's home treated?

If the resident owns a home, it will be counted as an asset for this means testing process, BUT the amount assessed as an asset will be capped at $165,271, rather than the actual real value of the home.

If the person owns a home, but someone else lives in the home and any of the following apply, then the home will not be counted as an asset.

- a partner or dependent child is living in the home
- a carer, who is eligible for a pension or income support payment, has lived in the home for at least two years
- a close relative, who is eligible for a pension or income support payment, has lived in the home for at least five years;

Please note that a carer's allowance does not count as an income-support payment.

*Please also see notes on page 10 relating to the value of the home.

Means Testing Process

The following method will be used by the government to arrive at a resident's Means-Tested Amount.

Income Test

50% of any assessed income over $26,660 p.a. =
(NB: Amounts for couples $26,192)

PLUS

Assets Test

Assets below $48,500 are not assessable

Assets valued at between $48,500 and $165,271 X 17.5%=$

Assets valued at between $165,271 and $398,814 X 1.0% = $

Assets valued at over $398,814 X 2.0% = $

Equals the Assets tested amount

Total is the resident's Means-Tested Amount

What does the Means-Tested Amount determine?

The resident's Means-Tested Amount then determines what fees, contributions or payments the resident may have to pay. These various amounts are called:

- 1. Base Daily Fees
- 2. Accommodation Contribution Payments
- 3. Means-Tested Care Fees
- 4. Accommodation Payments

1. Base Daily Fees

This is a standard fee set by the government that all residents must pay as a standard, base contribution towards the cost of their care, regardless of the results of the means testing process.

The Base Daily Fee is set at 85% of the full single base aged pension, before supplements are added.

Currently, this base aged pension is $826.20 per fortnight.

(various supplements totaling $81.40 make up the full single aged pension payment of $907.60 per fortnight)

The current Base Daily Fee is:

Base pension of $826.2 x 85% = $691.90 per fortnight

This is $50.16 day

This fee is generally adjusted by the government every 6 months, on March 20 and September 20 in line with rises in the aged pension.

NB: When one partner of a couple moves to aged care accommodation, both partners become eligible for the single pension.

2. Accommodation Contribution Payment

The Federal Government provides funding to assist with the cost of building and refurbishing aged care facilities. This funding is paid direct to facilities via accommodation supplements. Two levels of supplements are provided.

For older facilities that have not been refurbished
$36.59 per day per resident. This equates to $13,355 per resident per year

For new or recently refurbished facilities
$56.14 per day per resident. This equates to $20,491 per resident per year

If the resident has a Means-Tested Amount of up to $20,435 they will be expected to pay a contribution towards this accommodation supplement.

The amount that a resident is expected to pay will depend on:

- a) their Means-Tested Amount, and
- b) the type of facility they live in (older or new/refurbished)

The government then pays the facility any balance of supplement.

The amount that a resident must pay is called a:

Daily Accommodation Contribution (DAC)

Payment Options

Residents can elect to pay this Daily Accommodation Contribution or they can elect to pay it as a combination of a lump sum deposit and a Daily Accommodation Contribution to the facility to reduce the daily payment.

The lump sum component is fully refundable to the resident or their estate when they leave the aged care facility.

This lump sum is called a:

Refundable Accommodation Contribution (RAC)

To summarize Residents can elect to pay

A DAC or Combination of a RAC and a DAC

Example:

The resident's Means-Tested Amount works out to be $6,000.

The daily accommodation contribution (DAC) that they must pay will be:
$6,000 divided by 365 days = $16.44 per day.

They can pay this as:

- (i) A Daily Accommodation Contribution (DAC) of $16.44 per day
- (ii) A deposit (RAC) of say $50,000 plus a daily payment (DAC) of $8.54 day

This resident would also pay the Base Daily Fee of $50.16 day.

Another option available to this resident is to have the daily payment of $8.54 withdrawn from (paid out of) the deposit amount.

i.e. the deposit of $50,000 would be reducing by $8.54 per day

3. Means-Tested Care Fees

The Federal Government provides funds to aged care facilities to cover the cost of care provided to residents.

If a resident has a Means-Tested Amount of more than a certain amount, they will also have to pay an additional contribution towards the cost of their care.

This is called a Means-Tested Care Fee.

If a resident has a Means-Tested Amount of:

More than $20,435

they will have to pay the amount over this figure as a Means-Tested Care Fee.

Example:

A resident's Means-Tested Amount is $30,000.

Their Means-Tested Care Fee will be:

|--------------------------------|-----------------|
| Their Means-Tested Amount | $30,000 |
| Less | $20,435 |
| Their Means-Tested Care Fee is | $9,565 |

They will pay this as a daily fee payment of $26.21

This is in addition to their Base Daily Fee of $50.16

CAPPING RULES

In order to limit the amount a resident has to pay as Means-Tested Care Fees, the government has both annual and lifetime caps in place.

These caps are:

Annual Cap $26,965

Once a resident has paid Means-Tested Care Fees of $26,965 in any year, their payments cease until their next anniversary date.

The fee then restarts on their anniversary date.

Lifetime Cap $64,715

Once a resident has paid $64,715 during their whole time in aged care, their payments then cease permanently.

These caps only apply to Means-Tested Care Fees, not any other fees or payments the resident makes.

4. Accommodation Payments

If a resident has a Means-Tested Amount of:

More than $20,435

in addition to paying Means-Tested Care Fees (as detailed above), they will also have to pay the full cost of their accommodation by way of a refundable deposit paid to the facility.

For these residents, the aged care facility will not receive any accommodation supplement funding from the government, so the resident will have to pay the full cost of their accommodation.

The amount payable by the resident is established in negotiation with the aged care facility and will generally be in line with the Accommodation Prices set by the facility.

Accommodation Prices

Each facility must set and publicise the maximum accommodation price (deposit) payable for the facility and each room, or type of room, in that facility.

This accommodation price is the lump sum refundable deposit that a resident can be expected to pay. This price is called the:

Refundable Accommodation Deposit – (RAD)

The maximum Refundable Accommodation Deposits (RAD's) set by aged care facilities varies depending on the facility and the type of rooms in the facility.

The maximum RAD payable for Southern Cross Care (Tas) Inc. aged care facilities ranges between: $190,000 and $550,000 (this is fairly typical of most organisations)

NB:

These are the maximum RAD amounts.

The amount paid by each resident will be subject to negotiation.

PAYMENT OPTIONS

Residents who are asked to pay these Accommodation Payments can elect to pay as:

1. a lump sum deposit payment called a Refundable Accommodation Deposit (RAD)

OR

2. a daily fee, called a Daily Accommodation Payment (DAP)

OR

3. a combination of both, i.e.
Part Refundable Accommodation Deposit (RAD)
and
Part Daily Accommodation Payment (DAP)

When calculating the Daily Accommodation Payment (DAP) payable in place of a Refundable Accommodation Deposit (RAD), an interest rate, set by the government, is used. This interest rate is currently 5.77% per annum. (as from 1 April 2018)

Examples of RADs and corresponding optional DAPs

Deposit - RAD

$190,000
$250,000
$295,000
$345,000
$395,000
$450,000
$495,000
$550,000

Daily Payment – DAP

$30.04 day
$39.52 day
$46.63 day
$54.54 day
$62.44 day
$71.14 day
$78.25 day
$86.95 day

Example of part deposit (RAD) and part daily payment (DAP)

Resident negotiates a RAD of $450,000

They decide to pay a deposit (RAD) of $300,000 and to pay the balance as a daily payment DAP

They would have a daily payment of:

$$150,000 \times 5.77\% = $8,655$ per year which equals $23.71 per day

Having Daily Payments (DAP) taken out of your deposit (RAD)

Where a resident is paying their accommodation payment via a combination of a deposit (RAD) and a daily payment (DAP) they can elect to have the daily payment deducted from (paid out of) the deposit held for them.

Where a resident is also paying a Means-Tested Care Fee they can also elect to have this fee paid out of their deposit.

Residents could also, if they wished, have their base daily fees paid out of their deposit. There is significant flexibility available under the new regulations.

Valuation of the Resident's Home

As mentioned earlier, the value of the resident's home is capped at $165,271 for Means-testing purposes.

However, the full value of the home is used when calculating the maximum Refundable Accommodation Contribution (RAC) or maximum Refundable Accommodation Deposit (RAD) that a resident can pay.

After paying a RAC or RAD the resident must be left with at least $48,500 in remaining assets.

This needs to be considered when a resident is deciding how they wish to pay their accommodation payment. It may mean that they will need to opt for a part deposit and part daily payment arrangement.

SUMMARY – 3 BROAD CATEGORIES OF RESIDENTS

Resident with low income and low assets

If means testing shows that the resident has:

Assets of less than $48,500 and
Income of less than $26,660 per year

This will mean that the resident does not have a Means-Tested Amount

Resident pays only:

Base Daily Fee - $50.16 day

Resident with modest assets and lower income, OR Lower assets and higher income.

If means testing shows that the resident has a Means-Tested Amount of:

Between Nil and $20,435

Resident pays:

Base Daily Fee - $50.16 day

PLUS

Accommodation Contribution Payment

The amount of this payment will depend on their Means-Tested Amount and the type of facility they live in – i.e. either a new or refurbished facility or an older facility.

Resident with higher assets and/or higher income

If means testing shows that the resident's Means-Tested Amount is:

More than $20,435

Resident pays:

Base Daily Fee $50.16 day

PLUS

Means-Tested Care Fee

PLUS an

Accommodation Payment

(established in negotiation with the home)

Financial Planning and negotiation

It is important that prospective residents and their representatives arrange for personal discussions with aged care providers prior to admission if this is at all possible.

The new financial arrangements are very complex and the commitments applying to each resident will vary.

To arrange for an individual meeting to discuss your personal circumstances please contact one of our Residential Enquiries Officers.

Southern Cross Care (Tas) Inc. also recommends that residents may wish to seek independent financial advice.
